

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Disclosed is a third stage separator which includes two main clean gas outlets.

One main clean gas outlet communicates with a power recovery unit such as an expander turbine while the second main clean gas outlet communicates with a conduit that

- 5 bypasses the expander turbine. The present invention avoids use of the extra equipment, engineering and installation labor required to prevent the bypass conduit from placing a force load on the line to the power recovery unit.